For example, given a string like: `var str = "test/bigString"` I want to check if `str` contains the substring `"/bigString"`. I have tried two approaches: Concatenate `str` and `"/bigString"` and check if it is true. Strip the `"/bigString"` and check if it is true. I feel like 1 is the better solution but is there a faster/better way? I am wondering if it is better to use a character array for 1 and compare the array directly with `contains` or there is better approach? Thanks a lot! A:

There is a method on Foundation string named `contains` which does what you need. The following code uses that method to achieve what you are looking for: `if (str.contains("/bigString")) { // do something }` Self-help If you would like to avoid the self-help route or have any questions you want answered for free, send an email to selfhelp@nssuk.com. 1. This can be in a box at your feet or on the floor or anywhere you like. 3. Take a piece of paper and write down your emotions. Draw a circle and then circle the areas of your mind where you have negative emotions. 4. Identify your unconscious mind (troubled thoughts, feelings, worries etc).
